Based on data on the Worldometer website, positive cases of covid-19 in Indonesia have reached 808,340 on January 8, 2021, and will continue to grow. This increasing number in positive cases was not accompanied by effective health facilities. Quoted from CNBC and CNN Indonesia, there were many queues for coronavirus tests at hospitals and airports or train stations. This queue causes delays and makes the situation uncomfortable because it sometimes takes hours to get in line. Although the government has made good efforts to reduce queues by adding more personnel and health facilities, long queues are still occurring in several places. This long queue can actually lead to the spread of Covid-19 again. Therefore, the best solution to avoid queuing for the coronavirus test is an online reservation because this can see the available test quota, how many queues are there, and of course save energy and time for medical officers and patients. Firstly, The information on the available covid-19 test quota will be helpful for patients because patients feel certain in the queue. It also shortens queues and prevents misinformation between medical personnel and patients. If the quota is still available, the patient can immediately order at the time and if the quota is full, the patient can make a reservation at another time so that time and resources are not wasted for only queuing. Secondly, Information about queuing order also helps patients in time management. Patients do not need to waste all of their time queuing on the spot. Patients only need to come when the queue approaches. This is to avoid long queues and uncertain waiting times. Thirdly, with Covid-19 Test Online Reservation, both medical staff and patients can estimate the time and resources needed. Medical officers can manage the resources needed for medical services on that day so that medical personnel can work optimally. From the patient's point of view, patients can save time, money, and effort because they don't have to bother waiting for uncertainty. And as well as preventing the spread of covid-19 due to the crowd queuing too much. In conclusion, these are the three main reasons why Covid-19 Test Online Reservation can help optimize health facilities and avoid long queues. They can see the available test quota, how many queues are there and save energy and time for medical officers and patients. With online reservation and good management, it can optimize health facilities and prevent long queues. In consequence, this also prevents the spread of covid-19 in Indonesia by reducing the crowd of people in a location.
